

Data Protection

Videotranscript

Thank you

[Danielle Kaufmann]: Congratulations, you have completed the third chapter of our course. In this chapter, we were learning about disclosure of personal data.

[Beat Rudin]: First we looked at the definition of and the various principles underpinning disclosure for an individual-specific purpose. And we also addressed the ways in which disclosure is different than other forms of data processing.

[Danielle Kaufmann]: In addition to this, we looked at the restrictions on disclosures of personal data. We also discussed how disclosure works in practice and gave a step-by-step description of how a disclosure usually takes place.

[Beat Rudin]: Another important aspect was disclosure for a non-individual-specific purpose. We also covered disclosure of data in the field of human research, a specific and particularly important application.

[Danielle Kaufmann]: Finally, we looked at cross-border disclosure of personal data and discussed the risks and requirements specific to this type of disclosure.

[Beat Rudin]: Thank you so much for working through this chapter. We wish you all the best going forward and hope you enjoy the next chapter.